Raising the attendance numbers

The world changes, so do people's interests and their ways to spend spare time. Visiting museums and art galleries remains a popular way to enjoy one's free time, however, certain changes in attendance of these places can be seen. This report aims at comparing the given data and analyzing the changes.

As the statistics show, general interest of these places grows. In the period between 2013 and 2017 the British Museum showed a major growth in attendance rates. The same trend can be seen in statistics for the National Gallery and the Tate Gallery. However, the growth slowed down between 2015 and 2017 for all of the mentioned places. A peculiar change can be seen in statistics for the Natural History Museum and the Science Museum. The number of people who visited them in 2017 is respectively lower than the amount of visitors in 2013.

These substantial tendencies may be explained by a simple fact. In 2014 the National History Museum and the Science Museum introduced admission charges. Thus, their attendance rates have fallen drastically.

To raise the number of visitors, the following recommendations should be taken into consideration. Firstly, city authorities should appeal to the museum boards to lower or dismiss admission charges, if possible. Secondly, those museums should be advertised properly. ~~to meet people's~~ Museums could establish or host charity events and themed evenings to draw the society's attention.

All in all, the assessed numbers of attendance in 2013-2017 have shown that some museums should reconsider their charge policy in order to gain popularity. On the contrary, most well-known museums and art galleries keep showing the growth in numbers of visits, which can be accelerated by advertising.

ANSWER SHEET

Museums and galleries face many problems nowadays. People prefer looking at pictures at home online without queues and crowds in traditional museums. Despite this positive rates of museum attendance can be observed.

To show modern tendencies of visiting museums a Social Statistics table can be drawn on. The table shows a pretty fast growth of number of visitors of the most of the English museums and galleries in 2015 and 2017 compared to 2013. On the contrary, a substantial drop of visitors number can be seen in Natural History and Science Museums at the same time. ~~It~~ It happens due to introduction of admission charges in these museums in 2014. Science Museum passed its status of the most visited museum of 2013 in the list to British Museum which respectively became the most attended one in 2015 and 2017 with more than 5 million visitors annually.

I believe that museums should make some changes to rise the rates of attendance. Firstly, museums and galleries should be easier to access so the admission charges should be as low as possible. Secondly, the museum boards of directors should make more children and teenager aimed exhibitions and activities to attract more young people. Moreover, interactive programmes are always the most interested in so I suggest introducing more of them.

I hope, that my appeals will be heard and bigger numbers will appear in the chart. Young generation is the one that should be involved in visiting museums and galleries as in the age of internet they children start to forget what real art and culture are.

I have collected some information based on attendance of English museums and galleries. Now, I would like to make a brief report about visits of that places. To begin with, from 2013 to 2017 the number of visitors has increased ⁱⁿ more than 2 times in average. Unfortunately, ~~the~~ the museums that have introduced different admission charges had a lack of visitors as a result.

As for ^{the} progress, in the Tate Gallery there were about 0,9 mln people in 2013, but in 2017 near 2,2 mln people have visited the gallery. As for me, the increase is obvious and amazing. On the contrary, museums with additional charges lost more than a half of their visitors. In case of the Science Museum from 2013 to 2015 the number of attendants changed in 3 times, from 3,8 mln to 1,3 mln people. It seems to be a tragedy and I have some solutions for the problem.

First of all, I would better cancel all charges or improve a system of lower payments at least. I mean cheap tickets for children, students and etc. Also, it will be great to renew expositions and art-objects to make the galleries more attractive for teenagers and grown-ups.

In conclusion, it's great that nowadays people are still interested in art and history. Only a few steps will make museums and galleries more visiting and available for an average person. Finally, places like that make all the people to enjoy the beauty and feel respectively to the World's art.

Museums and galleries in England draw attention of millions of people annually. The chart above shows the number of attenders of several English museums and galleries from 2013 to 2017.

In general, we can make few conclusions from the data given. Rate of art galleries' popularity is constantly increasing, while history and science museums are not as popular as they used to be. However, British Museum not only remains interesting for people, but continues to get more and more visitors every year.

Although the substantial growth of British Museum's attenders from 2013 to 2015, the period of 2015-2017 has not brought as many people. I would respectively recommend to reconsider advertising of British Museum. Despite the fact that the number of visitors of National History Museum in 2015 was about two times less than two years before, the museum has started to slowly get people back. Museum's management should continue ~~its~~ improving its social work.

To conclude, all results of the research are rather appealing. It appears that all of the museums that took part in research have increased their popularity over the last few years. It is important for museum to aim for more new visitors, because a museum is not only made for spending spare time, but it also has significant scientific and educational functions.

Annual Nowadays in England exists a lot of various museums and galleries. This report is going to reflect on the data about the attendance of such places gathered from social statistics for three

From 2013 to 2017 the interest of the population in visiting national museums and galleries has grown significantly. It can be seen from the statistics of visits to British Museum, National Gallery, Tate Gallery. From 2013 to 2017 - the amount of visitors has grown at least two times. Although, as the data suggests the attendance of Natural History Museum and Science Museum has dropped greatly from 2013 and even though since 2015 increased a little it ~~can't~~ cannot match the other three. This might be due to these museums introducing admission charges in 2014.

My recommendations to the museum board of directors will be that in order to appeal to the visitors more museums should be free of admission fees as it greatly ruins people's interest in visiting such places.

In the conclusion, it is really important to push into the masses the idea of visiting galleries and museums as it is definitely great for cultural education of England's nation, and its evolution.

ANSWER SHEET

Well, attendance of museums is quite high. But some museums are more popular than the others. It can be explained by different interests of people.

Analyzing data in chart, we can say that popularity grows in time. More and more people visit museums and increase their rate of attendance. But those museums, which introduced admission charges in 2014 lost their popularity and now it's not as high as it was in 2013.

So, we can compare some data. For example, National and Tate galleries were less popular than Natural History and Science museums in 2013. Now they've changed places. I think, that's because people began relating more respectively to art.

Also, comparing years and attendance, we can say that British Museum has the biggest popularity raise. It's about 3 mln ~~people~~ difference of people to appeal in museum.

According to report, I'd give some recommendations.

Firstly, museums must have their own web-site. It will really increase popularity, as lots of people nowadays use the Internet.

Secondly, directors should order more ads in different places, but it shouldn't be annoying. If it will, people will stay away from museums.

And final advice will be:

You should make ticket price cheaper or give tickets for free. It will change profit and replace it by attendance.

In conclusion, I can say, that attendance of museums is high, but it can be higher. If you'll try, you'll always get what you want.

ANSWER SHEET

There are many museums and galleries in England nowadays. Millions of people come there to visit these substantial places of art.

The most popular place of visiting is British Museum. It appeals to over 5 millions of people. ~~Other~~ museums and galleries are not so popular as the previous one but some of them have become really popular since 2013. For instance, a number of visitors has increased much in National Gallery and Tate Gallery.

Natural History Museum and Science Museum introduced admission charges in 2014 but now they do not have many visitors. Especially Science Museum has lost his popularity for the last four years. In 2013 there were 3.8 million of visitors but now there are only 1.6 million. By comparison the difference of attendance between Science Museum and British Museum is 4 million of people.

In order to tackle a shortage of visitors I can recommend Science Museum to organise different interesting events for children with using a rate of new technologies to show them that science might be easy and make them interested in it. Moreover, I suggest to Natural Museum to make exhibits which can move or make sounds because it will be really fascinating and more people will want to come there.

To conclude I would like to say that museums and galleries must become more and more popular with every year. And I'm pretty sure that my recommendation will help such places to be more visited and respectively outstanding.

The attendance of national museums and galleries is an important metric of how interested people are in English culture.

Statistics show that rate of visits to museums and galleries in England is rising. British Museum has shown a three million increase in visits over the last four years. That's a lot compared to National Gallery and Tate Gallery that 2.1 and 1.3 million new visits relatively. However, not all cultural sites had substantial increases in visits. Natural History Museum and Science Museum had an enormous decline in visits. They decreased by 1.8 million and 2.2 million ~~in~~ relatively. This is due to new admission policies of these museums. The decrease was very big, but it is less than the growth other major museums had.

The changes were introduced in 2014 and effected in the decline in visits. This shows that ~~without~~ cancelling charges would let more people come. I believe that would ~~have~~ ^{give} a greater advantage to England then saving up money that used to be spent on museums. Although museums and galleries that have not undergone changes in admission policies had a substantial growth in visits, they can try to appeal to international tourists through advertisements in airports to get new visitors.

To sum up, as the reports shows the rate of attendance of English museums and art galleries is on the rise but admission charges had a bad impact ~~on~~ ^{where} they were introduced. This is why they should be cancelled. For the

There is a wide-spread opinion that the popularity of English museums and galleries has significantly dwindled in the past few years. I have decided to make a report based on statistical data, in order to check this opinion.

To begin with, the statistics shows that this statement is not entirely correct. According to the collected data, some places of interest have, on the contrary, gained more popularity in recent years; however, some have lost a substantial part of visitors. Those ones which appeal to people more than they used to are the British Museum, the Tate Gallery and the National Gallery. The British Museum, in particular, in 2017 had 3 mln visitors, more than it did in 2013. The Tate Gallery and the National Gallery have increased the numbers of visitors since 2013 by 1,3 mln and 2,1 mln respectively.

However, ~~not~~ all the places of interest did not have such changes in their rates of attendance. For example, the Science Museum lost 2,5 mln of ~~visitors~~ visitors in 2015 in comparison with 2013. Nonetheless, this museum and the others, which had suffered such decreases, managed to attract more people in 2017.

In my judgement, nowadays museums have to make certain improvements in order to stay in demand. As for me, more interactive objects should be added to exhibition halls and various online tours should be arranged for those ones who are unable of coming to the museum.

In the upshot, I must add that with proper improvement and modernisation English museums and galleries will be able to regain their popularity in near future.

Quality over quantity.

Human kind distinguishes itself from other inhabitants of the Earth by two things. The first one is the ability to think and the second one is a possibility to share knowledge and experience through advanced means of communication. The latter one is a bit more important to us today. Practical demonstration is always more effective than learning theory. That is where museums come in. Thanks to Social Statistics, we can track down the attendance of some of them.

The report given to us is clearly divided midway: there are free museums and the ones who chose to introduce admission charges. The appeal of the first group is pretty clear - they're free to visit, so the attendance rate was skyrocketing. In my opinion though, choosing to charge people for entrance is better in the long run. If we're simply looking at the data given, museums with ticket prices had their visitor count drop down more than two times compared with free-of-charge times. But since in the last years growth hasn't been really high for both groups, the possibility of providing a higher quality service could do a lot more for the education of the public. Since they have all that ticket money, they can introduce new ways of "edutainment", such as creating interactive attractions for the younger audience. It can have them invested a lot more in education, rather than just watching or listening. Kids could draw on ^{special} boards or even buy and copy some famous paintings.

Sure, you can respectfully state that you have loads of people coming in and out, but higher quality "filling" could create a substantial group of people that will be more interested in the subject at hand, which is much better than a million people visiting, taking a photo and forgetting about all of it next week, if not a next day.

Nowadays the attendance of British museums and galleries is increasing.

In 2013 there were about 13,7 million people who visited national museums and galleries of England. From this quantity 3,6 million people visited galleries and 11,1 million people visited museums. The National History Museum was the most popular among the tourists, from all other museums and galleries.

However, in 2014 the National History Museum was visited by only 1,6 million people, from 14,2 million, who went to British museums and galleries that year. People paid more attention to British Museum, which beat all the records.

In 2015, about 15,1 million people went to museums and galleries. The number increased on 0,9 million people according to the last year. People ^{visit} more galleries. Maybe they ^{are} attracted to them because of some paintings.

As far as I am concerned, I believe that some changes should be ^{done} ~~made~~ to make people feel ~~more~~ ^{substantial} ~~respectively~~ ~~about~~ about museums. First of all, ^{more} ~~more~~ exhibitions must take place in the museums. The reason for this is to attract people. What is more, it's ^{drawn on} that prices on the tickets must become much lower. That is because the reason of not visiting the museums ~~and~~ and galleries can be a price.

To sum up, I believe that the ~~solutions~~ ~~recommendations~~ which I gave will help to increase the visiting to British museums and galleries.

ANSWER SHEET

English museums and galleries traditionally are necessary places to visit for many tourists and local people. However, nowadays the attendance of these places appeals not as satisfying, as it should to.

According to the research, ~~the attendance of~~ Natural History Museum has lost for about two millions of visitors per year in just ~~four~~ four years. Even one of the most famous museums, British Museum, is not becoming more popular. The attendance of ~~it~~ it has been increasing a little since 2015.

For instance, in 2013 the ~~amount~~ of people visiting the National Gallery had been increasing rapidly, in contrast with 2015 and further when it became much slower.

All these problems still can be solved. In digital age millions of teenagers, young people and adults consider recommendations from the Internet reliable, so asking bloggers and celebrities to advertise the museums may attract people and improve high rates. Also we should remember, that modern society asks for modern things. Renovating exhibits and using gadgets will help, too.

To sum up, museums and galleries remain an important part of education and the interest paying to them must be improved and now is the best time to start.

ANSWER SHEET

There is a chart where we can see 5 different museums and galleries. Their attendance during 3 years is also shown.

It is clear that there is a rise in ^{the} attendance in British Museum, National and Tate Galleries. The amount of people who visited them in 2013 is the smallest while 2017 has the biggest rate. However, there is a ~~substantial~~ decline in ^{the} attendance in Natural History Museum and Science Museum. A lot of people visited them in 2013, but the figures are respectively low in 2017.

The amount of people who visited British ~~Museum~~ ^{Museum} in 2015 is nearly 5 millions. It is almost 3 millions more than the amount of people who visited Tate Gallery. There was not any substantial change in figures in Natural History Museum and Science Museum. Their attendance is almost equal during all three years.

As for me, I would recommend to tell people more about museums and galleries in newspapers or on the Internet. In my opinion, it will make a great appeal to students because the information from museums can be used in their reports. I would also recommend to make special discounts or ^{create} different opportunities to win free tickets.

All in all, this chart can ~~be~~ drawn on ~~to show~~ ^{the} the level of ^{the} popularity of the museums and ^{the} galleries among English people. We see that British Museum is a real leader. Unfortunately, Tate Gallery is not very popular.

Hi everyone today I'm going to tell you about the Rate of attendance of museums and galleries for last years.

I have collected a lot of data and here it is. British Museum was visited by 2.6 mln. people at ... 2013th year, by 5.1 mln. at ... 2015th year ^{and} by 5.6 mln. at ... 2017th year. Also have collected some data about Tate Gallery, it was visited by 0.9 mln. of people at 2013th, by 1.9 mln. at 2015th year and by 2.2 mln. at 2017th. Attendance of that museum and a gallery went up year by year according to my data.

I think the main reason of this is that the population (70%) is growing year by year too. But it isn't the only one. And now I'll give some advises to owners of other galleries and museums, about how to get more visitors. Firstly you should make your gallery or museum look better from inside, for example paint walls, replace old parts of the building by new ones. Then you should make it look better from the outside, maybe by planting trees around or painting it from outside. And finally you can order an advertisement of your gallery or museum in some magazine.

That's all I wanted to tell you about attendance of galleries and museums, so thanks for listening and goodbye.

ANSWER SHEET

Visiting museums and galleries is a good way to learn some new information about the country and famous people who lived or live there. Usually this kind of free time activities is mostly popular with tourists.

According to the chart, I would like to say that the number of people who attend museums and galleries increased. People draw on visiting these places because it is available nowadays. Social Statistics Source rated national museums and galleries in England and due to their research, British Museum is the most visited place since 2015. Judging by the given chart, I would like to say that people became more interested in art than in history and science. For example, visitors of National Gallery have increased from 2.7 mln to 4.8 mln since 2013. In comparison, Science Museum has decreased from 3.8 mln to 1.6 mln people since 2013. The other thing is that Tate Gallery has increased one million visitors for a short period of time. I suppose that people respectively behave to the art.

As a solution to the decreasing attendance of museums, I recommend their workers to find the most interesting way of telling the information. For instance, watching films and playing interactive games appeal for children. What is more, substantial advertisements of museums can help to increase the attendance.

To conclude, I suppose that the popularity of visiting museums and galleries will increase in the future.

ANSWER SHEET

I have collected some data on English museums and galleries attendance, and now I would like to introduce ~~my~~ the results of my work, which show a lot.

The most fast-growing visit rate can be noticed ~~to~~ at British Museum. The least visited museum is Science Museum. ~~British Museum and National Gallery got 2.5 million and 1.6 million new visitors~~ The difference between 2013 and 2015 is marvelous (for example, British Museum and National Gallery got 2.5 million and 1.6 million new visitors respectively), while the difference between 2015 and 2017 is not ^{so} significant: +0.5 million visitors for British Museum and National Gallery and +0.3 million visitors for all the rest. Some museums (National History Museum and Science Museum) lost a lot of their visitors between 2013 and 2015, 2.1 million and 2.5 million respectively). Although there is a gallery which did not show any ~~extraord~~ extraordinary growth or loss of visitors, Tate Gallery with a total of 2.2 million people by 2017.

Analyzing the collected information, I can recommend these museums and galleries to advertise more, and not only should ~~it~~ ^{the advertisement} be pleasant to look at, but also be very ~~can~~ catchy so that people would be really interested in visiting their cultural bodies.

To sum it all up I would like to say that cultural education is getting more and more important nowadays, but we must all acknowledge the fact that history and science are important to know too, so we should raise ourselves and new generations with a special affection for both art and science.
